

Interlibrary loan services:

The Reinbeck Public Library is part of the SILO system (State of Iowa Libraries Online). Most interlibrary transactions are done through SILO. As a borrowing library, the Reinbeck Library notifies patrons when requested items become available, or notifies them if the materials are not available. The borrowed items due dates are specified by the lending libraries. As a lending library, the Reinbeck Library sends out materials through the van system or the mail. Materials sent out to other libraries generally have a one month check out period as recommended by the state library. Some items may be renewed. High demand items may not generally be renewed. The interlibrary loan service is free unless otherwise specified. The Reinbeck Library also takes part in the Access Plus program by which patrons of other Iowa libraries may directly check out materials from the Reinbeck Library. Access Plus library patrons will adhere to the same rules as the Reinbeck patrons for length of checkout, fines, and cost of repair or replacement of materials.
